

Security consultancy at IDsec covers a whole range of activities from policy development, through design and integration to day-to-day management support.

Incident Handling

Have you been hacked? Or think you might have been hacked? If so, you probably needed some temporary expertise to confirm the intrusion, stabilise the situation and make the first steps towards ensuring that it can't happen again.

We have direct experience of systems that have been hacked and, in some cases, are still being exploited by baddies and other unauthorised users. This means that we can provide short-term help, covering both UNIX/Linux and Windows platforms.

All with the utmost discretion, of course...

Policy Development

Everyone knows why firewalls, vulnerability testing and intrusion protection systems are needed. But how do they relate to business requirements? And are they in step with operational procedures in the rest of the organisation?

To get the best out of any network security expenditure, whether on protection systems or assessment exercises, it is important to have a security policy in place. This identifies critical information and services and defines the level of protection needed for them.

IDsec staff have considerable experience in this area, having worked with government departments and commercial organisations in developing policies that can be used by staff at all levels to guide deployments and day-to-day operations.

Management Support

Constant change in the network security field makes it very difficult to plan ahead. Projects come and go so fast that the workload never matches the resources on hand.

We can supply experienced consultants to balance the load. They can take on technical tasks such as firewall tuning and monitoring or help sort out the procedural and management issues for the longer term.

Feel Good About Your Network

IDsec is an independent company specialising in network security. We can assess your security and advise on long-term protection: as we have for a range of blue-chip clients since 1997.
